How Did We Get Here?

The Political, Economic and
Religious Influences Resulting in a
President Trump

---

Cynthia Schmidt, J.D.

Center for Law and Policy
University of Central Florida

The United States has never before had a president lacking government or military experience, and yet Donald Trump now leads both the U.S. government and military. President Trump is unlike any president the U.S. has ever had in many ways. What forces resulted in a President Trump? What led up to this politically, and economically? To what degree do American voters choose their candidate because of religious issues, or from influence by their ministers? Was this an unusual set of circumstances or will the U.S. see something similar in years to come?

The lecture is part of the series Pluralism in Economics; free entry.
